

Cut out on solid lines.
Mountain fold on dotted lines. Record information about each branch under flaps.

Executive

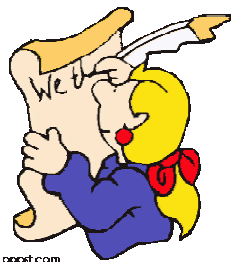

Judicial

Legislative

Branches Of Government

Government There are three branches of the government:

Executive: makes sure the constitution is being followed. The president is the head of this branch.

Legislative: this is congress, which includes the House of Representative (number depends on the population of each state) and the Senate (100 people, 2 from each state) they make the laws.

Judicial: includes the Supreme Court (9 judges), which guards the constitution and makes sure the laws are followed.